The link between exercise and mood is pretty strong, Otto says. Activity may be especially important for people at risk of developing anxiety disorder, he says. Strolling through a therapy session often helps patients relax and open up. Their workshop was based on their therapist guide “Exercise for Mood and Anxiety Disorders,” with accompanying patient workbook (Oxford).